This late 19th century house, presently in need of paint, is a two and one-half story gable roofed frame structure with a two and one-half story gabled wing projecting forward on the south side of the front. The two bay wing has a pointed arched window in the gable. There are three bays in the portion of the front on the north side, and above are two gabled dormers. A one story porch across the entire front is supported by doric columns. It has a ballustrade with turned spindles and a row of dentils under the eaves. An ornamented pediment in front of the door is supported by two brackets on each corner. The south half of the porch is screened. The door has rectangular sidelights and a rectangular light above.

Significance:

This large assymetrical house, with small-scale classical details, reflects the influence of the Queen Anne style of architecture that was popular in the last quarter of the 19th century. Although in need of paint it contributes to the historic character of High Street, which has several late 19th century houses of architectural interest on this end toward the river.

This house was built in 1878 by James W. Henry, Jr., eldest son of Dr. James W. Henry of Cambridge. The lot was the site of an earlier house that dated back at least as early as the 1850's, but that house was torn down when the present one was built. Henry died in 1924 and the property has passed through several owners until the present ones acquired it in 1973. This asymetrical structure reflects the influence of the Queen Anne style, which was popular in the late nineteenth century. It is in need of a new cost of paint.
